

GRAPHIC DESIGN

Graphic Design uses the marriage of form, function, and imagination to create a visual language. Innovative design isn't just nice to look at—it has a significant impact on the way we live our lives.

As a Graphic Design student at RMCAD, you'll learn to communicate complex ideas to fit the needs of our ever-changing world. And by putting theory into practice, you'll develop a design expression that is totally unique. The Graphic Design program at RMCAD focuses on human-centered design, setting itself apart from others and ensuring that you graduate with a quality portfolio. You'll complete well-rounded, challenging, and relevant coursework that teaches students to approach design with impactful communication and user experience in mind.

PROGRAM OUTCOMES

Program outcomes can be found in the RMCAD Academic Catalog and serve the Institutional Learning Outcomes. These are Rocky Mountain College of Art + Design's overarching goals and competencies, which include: cultural competence, communication competence, design competence, and critical thinking. In addition to meeting program outcomes, students enrolled in Graphic Design will also fulfill requirements in Liberal Arts and Foundations.

SKILLS YOU'LL GRADUATE WITH
